WILL VOTE THE BLANKET BALLOT

EVERY VOTER SHOULD BEGIN TO GET POSTED ON HOW TO VOTE.

NO MORE RIBBON BALLOT

New Blanket Ballot to Greet Voters at November Election—Read the Law.

The people at the coming election will vote the blanket ballot. It will be wholly different from the strip ballots that have been in use for a good many years. It will be well for every voter to begin to get posted on how to vote under the new system. The following is taken from the Revised Statutes of Missouri:

Section 4869. Voting—voters shall proceed—how. On receipt of his ballot, the voter shall withdraw, and without leaving the enclosed space, retire alone to one of the voting booths so provided, and shall prepare his ballot for voting in the following manner: Should the voter desire to vote a "straight" party ticket he shall place a cross (x) mark in the circle immediately below the party name or name of vice-presidential candidate. If the voter desires to vote for one or more candidates on more than one party ticket by voting what is commonly called "split ticket" he may place a (x) mark in the circle immediately below the party name and mark cross (x) marks in the squares at the left of the names of candidates on the other ticket for whom he wishes to vote. If the voter decides to vote for more than one candidate whose name or names do not appear on the printed ballot he may do so by drawing a line through the printed name of candidate for such office, and writing below such cancelled name the name of the person for whom he desires to vote, and placing a cross mark in the square at the left of such name. The squares so marked shall take precedence over the cross marked in the circle. Where there are two or more candidates for like office in a group a cross (x) mark in the square to the left of the candidate's name, automatically votes against the candidate whose name appears within the same horizontal lines in the column under the circle in which appears the cross (x) mark unless the voter indicates another candidate to be voted against by drawing a line through such candidate name. All candidates of the party whose circle is marked shall be counted as voted for excepting where squares are crossed preceding the names of the candidates in other columns; if two or more candidates for the same office are thus designated neither shall be counted. If the cross (x) is not placed in the circle immediately below the party name at the head of the column, but does appear in the squares opposite the various candidates' names then only these names shall be counted

MONEY TO THE HOSPITAL

Total From Corn Is $80—Man Pays $1 for Three Apples—Davison and Hosher Buy 66 Ears.

Forty-five business men of Maryville and farmers from Nodaway County purchased the corn that had been exhibited at the corn show of the Farmers Trust Company in Maryville. The three ears winning first prize, raised and exhibited by Everett Gray of Clearmont, were purchased by George Robb Ellison of Maryville and the three ears winning second place, raised and exhibited by John Wolfe of Clearmont, were purchased by James Todd of Maryville. Mr. Ellison and Mr. Todd each paid $5 for his corn, or $1.66 2-3 an ear.

The next highest price was $3.50, paid by W. J. Montgomery for the three ears taking fourth place. None of the exhibits of three ears each brought less than $1.

Following are the men who made the other purchases:

Two or three other purchases were made and the money paid in cases where the clerk was not able to get the name of the purchaser.

One man took a fancy to three fine apples on a plate and said that he would give $1.00 for them. It was the intention to take the entire exhibit of fruit to the St. Francis hospital, but it was decided to sell this one exhibit and take the dollar instead.

The total amount received from the corn was $80. The $80 and the exhibits o ffruit were taken Saturday afternoon after the sale to the hospital. Mother Augustine received the gifts and expressed deep appreciation.

The farmers of the county who made the exhibits donated the corn and the business men and farmers rallied well to the appeal to purchase the exhibits in order that the money received might be turned over to the hospital.

W. D. Hosher and Henry Davison bought sixty-six ears of corn to plant on their farms next year. The corn they purchased was from the honorable mention exhibits.

EXIT OLD BUILDING 4TH AND BUCHANAN

FORMER HOME OF BOTTLING WORKS BEING RAZED

IS HISTORIC STRUCTURE

Furniture Store, Saloon, Bottling Works and Dance Hall Have Had Place in It

The old Maryville Bottling works building at the corner of Fourth and Buchanan streets is being torn down. The works of razing the building started this morning. W. H. Ellsworth has the contract for the job.

This building has for a long time been the subject of much comment because of its age and the appearance it gave to the corner.

The building was built in 1871 by Stephens Brothers, two Germans. It was built to serve as a furniture store and was located where the Farmers Trust Co., now stands. Some time later the ground on which the building stood was purchased by George Baker. The Stephens Brothers moved the building from its site to where it now stands. At this time they built the Maryville Tribune building and installed their furniture store there. The building on Fourth and Buchanan was then used as a saloon. After a few years Peter Gross, another German, bought the building from the Stephens Brothers. He transformed it into a bottling works.

In 1884 Richard Kuchs and Peter Quast bought the Bottling works from Gross. They continued in the same business and in 1895 Kuchs bought out the Quast interest. The bottling works continued to be operated until local option caused it to be closed in 1916.

The second floor of the building was used as a dance hall for several years. It was a popular place and was frequented by all of the young people of Maryville.

The building is perhaps the oldest business building in Maryville. Although not the first it is the only surviving one.

When it was built the lumber used in the construction was hauled from St. Joseph by teams of oxen.

GRAHAM FIRST TOWN IN COUNTY TO REACH QUOTA

Time of the Salvation Army Drive for Funds Has Been Extended Another Week

The Salvation Army committee at Graham for the purpose of raising the quota of $30 at that place for the army's drive for funds was the first in the county to report a full quota, according to C. E. Wells, county chairman. The report from Graham came to Mr. Wells this morning.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct 16—The Salvation Army campaign for funds in Kansas and Western Missouri scheduled for the week of October 9-16 has been extended another week for counties which have not yet raised their complete quotas, Brigadier John C. Smith, divisional commander, has announced.

The action was taken at the request of a number of advisory boards of the army, which, due to the various circumstances, have been handicapped or delayed in their campaigns.

Many counties went over the top the first few days of the week, raising their quotas without difficulty and the Army headquarters staff is highly pleased with the progress of the campaign. Interest manifested by the boards throughout the division indicates that quotas will virtually all be obtained despite the unavoidable delays and adverse circumstances which exists in some section.

The realization of the extreme necessity for funds to carry the Army through the coming winter and year is given as the reason for the determined work by the advisory boards and campaign committees.

DISAGREES WITH CORONER'S VERDICT

MALOTTE THINKS BRAMBLE COULDN'T HAVE KILLED SELF.

HE WAS LEFT HANDED

Bullet Entered Head From Right Side and Took Downward Course—Funeral This Afternoon.

Dr. Karl R. Malotte, who examined William Robert Bramble's body yesterday, disagrees with the coroner's verdict that it was suicide. He says that the examination showed that the bullet entered Bramble's head three and one-half inches above the right ear and came out on the level of his ear on the left side. This being true the shot would have been fired with the right hand and high enough to take a downward course through the head.

Bramble was known to have been left handed and some of his friends in the army say that he always fired a pistol and handled short arms with his left hand. The bullet was fired from an automatic and only one shot entered the head. Persons familiar with an automatic say that the trigger must be instantly released if only one shot is discharged.

It is said that Bramble carried a sum of some $300 with him when he left Maryville and the theory has been advanced that he may have been killed for this. George Bramble, father of the dead man, says that some of the questions he asked the authorities in San Francisco by telegrams have never been satisfactorily answered.

OUR RURAL DAY CAUSES EDITORIAL

KANSAS CITY TIMES CARRIES AN ARTICLE TODAY.

'EDUCATION AND BIGOTRY'

Is Title of Editorial Prompted by Nodaway County Rural School Day.

Another city paper has taken notice of the Nodaway County Rural School Day, which was held here last week. Although Nodaway County is not mentioned in the article, today's Kansas City Times carries an editorial entitled, "Education and Bigotry," which was prompted by the school day held here. The editorial follows:

One day last week a Missouri county celebrated a school day. High and grade schools of several counties united in the exercises. An immense throng gathered for the occasion. Five thousand rural school children marched in a parade. There were reminders of the progress being made in education and contrasts with the pioneer days in the country and small town schools.

To witness such a demonstration and similar demonstrations that might be made in thousands of communities of this country; to think of the billions America has invested in education, of the army of teachers, of the millions of boys and girls, young men and women that crowd the schools, even the colleges, one might feel secure in the conclusion that the nation, a democracy based on individual intelligence, is safe. But in the face of this effort there are disquieting evidences of intolerance, bigotry, narrow-mindedness, an unreadiness to reason and to act upon reason. There is an arraying of class against class, group against group, religion against religion, race against race; there are quick responses to appeals to prejudice, ready ears to the boasts and promises of the demagogue. Are we really an enlightened people, true followers of the principles of democracy, freedom, liberty, fraternity and equality of right and opportunity?

More schools, teachers, pupils, equipment are not alone the solution. Removing illiteracy will not suffice. There is an ignorance worse than illiteracy—it is the ignorance of those who have eyes, but will not see; minds that will not be broadened either by books or training; who hold beliefs they will not practice, and cherish unfounded convictions that challenge all efforts at removal. Here is the real menace to America.

There is no call for the easy going tolerance that admits everything and combats nothing. But the call is for the kind of tolerance in the presence of which liberty can exist, and without which freedom will have no chance. The rightly tolerant man, the really intelligent men, is your best fighter for truth and a worthy cause. That has been demonstrated from George Washington on down through American history.

Are we losing sight of this vital fact, with all our education, our schools, our hordes of those who would train themselves for advanced positions in life? Is American education making the onslaughts it should against unenlightenment, against bigotry and narrow-mindedness?

An exchange remarks that it is hard to gauge public opinion on the Volstead Act accurately because a "wet" wants his liquor so much more vehemently than a "dry" does not.

While the Republican campaign orators are pleading with the people to "stand by the President" the party leaders seem to be quietly looking around for another candidate for 1924.

Since the passage of the new tariff bill, the big profiteers of the country are singing this glad refrain:

"We are jolly profiteers
Our gains are growing fast;
We're fatter than we've been for years
Since Fordney's bill was passed
Come, trusts, and join our hearty cheers,
For what was done for profiteers."

The Federal law providing for aid to good roads in the several state contains a provision that the state receiving such aid must maintain the roads in first class condition. Missouri, at the present time, has no provision and no adequate funds for the proper maintenance of the road system about to be built. This is another reason for the adoption of amendment number three to be voted upon next month. It provides that a certain portion of the receipts from automobile licenses shall go toward the upkeep and maintenance of the public highways. The Federal law provides further that, if a state fails to maintain the roads in which Federal aid has been received, the national government will make the needed repairs and deduct the amount so expended from any future money that may be allotted to the state.

It's toasted. This one extra process gives a delightful quality that can not be duplicated

The Widow Wins Her Case

By ELLA SAUNDERS

(©, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

"But, my dear Mr. Oldham, you seem to think this is the middle of the Nineteenth century instead of the Twentieth," protested Mrs. Lane.

Henry Oldham thumped his fist on the table. "I don't care if it's the Fifty-ninth!" he bellowed. "My daughter goes motor-boating with that scoundrel, Henry Perks, and comes home at 8 o'clock next morning with a tale about the engine breaking down at sea. Maybe it's true, maybe it ain't. But that girl don't enter my house again except as Perks' wife."

Pretty Mrs. Lane expostulated. "Do you mean to say that those two young people, who are simply friends, have got to be tied up together miserably through life because of a motor-boat accident?" she demanded.

"He's compromised her. The Oldham's have always held themselves above scandal. I don't care if the story's true or if it ain't. That girl comes here as Mrs. Perks or she don't come back again."

Mrs. Lane sighed. Henry Oldham, at sixty-two, was the most unreasonable man in the town. She had had Nancy under her own roof for nearly a week, during which she had tried again and again, as others had, to bring Oldham to reason.

Oldham, however, stuck doggedly to his guns. His view was simply that if a young man and a young woman went out together one afternoon, and came back together the next morning, they must come back married. An elopement he would stand for. Scandal he would not. And that was that.

Nobody but Mrs. Lane would have dared approach Mr. Oldham more than once. He had driven his own sister out of his house when she expostulated with him. He had threatened to disinherit his married daughter, Mildred, for putting a word in on behalf of Nancy. But Ann Lane and Henry Oldham were old friends. They had known each other for 15 years.

Mrs. Lane had been a widow for five years now, and it was said she was setting her cap for Henry Oldham, but they were good friends enough to laugh at the report. Henry Oldham said frankly that at his age he was not to be caught. In his best moods he "joshed" Mrs. Lane about it.

She came round with her car next day. "I've come to take you for a little spin out to Port Maitland," she said. "You don't get out enough, Henry."

"Not a word," sighed Anna Lane. "I see it's impossible to persuade you to take a reasonable point of view, Henry."

"What you choose to call reasonable—absolutely," Henry Oldham answered, as he stepped into the car.

Anna Lane's car was the best make on the market—which every one who owns a car knows. They spent a jolly afternoon at the seaside, had dinner together, and prepared to return.

"I'm going to take you home through Pocono Gap," said Anna Lane. "It's the most rural thing imaginable. I want you to see it, Henry."

"Strikes me you're taking me a pretty good ways round," remarked Henry Oldham, who had been getting a little apprehensive somehow as the sun went down and they seemed farther and farther from home in a wild, mountainous region.

"Oh, it's only fifteen miles to the nearest village, Somerville, and then it's a quick run home," answered his companion.

They went on a mile. And suddenly the car stopped dead. Anna Lane got out to investigate, for Henry Oldham knew nothing about cars. She tinkered. Finally she got down on her back underneath. She came back shaking her head.

"I can't think what's the matter with it," she said. And suddenly she stumbled, slipped, went down with a cry of pain.

She was white-faced when Henry helped her into the car. "I've wrenched my ankle," she said. "What are we going to do?"

"Won't it go?" demanded Henry.

"I'm afraid the—the carburetor's gone wrong. I can't fix it. What shall we do? Nobody's coming along at this time of night. We'll just have to wait till morning when the milk carts pass, unless—unless you want to walk 15 miles into the village and—and leave me here alone."

Henry Oldham glared at her. "That means we're stuck here for the night," he shouted.

"Worse than that," sobbed Anna. "It means I—I've got to marry you, and I can't bear it."

Henry Oldham had amassed his fortune by quick thinking and swift initiative. He took his medicine. After all, it was he or Nancy.

"I'll take that girl back," he said briefly. "Get a move on her."

Henry Oldham never went back on his word. In a thrice Anna had slipped out of the car; a half-minute, and they were bowling homeward.

"I suppose you'll never want to speak to me again," she said as she dropped him at his door.

"Yes I will," he declared. "I've been thinking—it wasn't such an awful shock as I'd expected. And I think I could stand it if you could, Anna. Suppose we try?"

Anna Lane smiled. "You dear old thing," she said, "of course I will. You're such a dear, and so—so really reasonable."

PARADE OF FIGHTING BIRDS

What Is Known as the Bass Rock, in the Firth of Forth, Scotland, Is Unique.

The fighting birds on the Bass rock, in the Firth of Forth are described by Oliver G. Pike in the London Daily Mail.

"It is certainly the most wonderful citadel I have ever looked upon," he writes. "Its sides rise straight from the sea, and if you placed St. Paul's cathedral by its side the cross would only just top the cliffs.

"Every available ledge rock contains its bird.

"In the past the Bass rock, in the Firth of Forth, has been a famous fortress, holding out for years against an attacking army. Now, it is a sea bird's citadel, and there they are safe on the impregnable cliffs.

"One moment there is silence, and that is the most beautiful moment of all, for it is like a scene from fairyland, with dream-wings floating above you. The next minute a gannet utters its harsh note and a thousand birds reply, until there is a deafening chorus.

"But if you have the temerity to climb up among the gannets—and to do this you must be a good climber—then you will see many interesting things.

"Several are fighting and their method of settling a battle is very different from that of the farm-yard cockerel.

"They find a convenient ledge, then, holding one another's beaks, pull and push in opposite directions. The one that wins the fight is the one which pushes or pulls its opponent over the cliff."

SETTLED MATTER OF WEIGHT

Lost Tires Had to Account for Many Pounds of Air Avowedly Pumped Into Them.

You never can tell what is going to happen in a golf game. Yesterday we were not playing so well, but we were enjoying the company of a friend mightily. Then he gave us this one:

"Had two tires stolen off the car the other night. The wife had had the car all day and left it out in front of the house while we were at dinner. Found the tires gone when we came out. Got to talking about this bit of knavery and wondered how the rogues got away with them.

"'Those tires are heavy, I suggested. They must have had a rig to carry them in.' That led the wife to wonder just how heavy the tires were anyhow.

"'Oh, I don't know,' I replied. 'I fancy that one of those tires must have weighed at least 50 pounds.'

"'How silly!' the wife retorted. 'It must have weighed a whole lot more than that, for I had 75 pounds of air put into it just this morning.'"

Agreed With Him.

There is no branch of art in which there is more pretense than in music. The trouble lies in the fact that music is a matter of appreciation as well as performance, and when a person likes a thing it is rather hard to tell him he does not.

Yet the discerning can positively know that such a one totally without study or musical knowledge, simply cannot appreciate a certain musical work, any more than one totally ignorant of books could really like Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire."

Yet what terrible bluffs such people put up!

"You know," he said, "I am in favor of singing all operas in this country in English. I think it preferable from every standpoint."

"I do, too," she gushed. "Why, I heard 'The Mikado' in English, and liked it very much."

Never Liked Early Rising.

In a recently published biography of William Ewart Gladstone and Mrs. Gladstone by their daughter, Mrs. Mary Drew, she relates that until past eighty, they from a sense of duty rose early every morning and attended church service before breakfast, not varying their custom no matter what the weather might be. But this practice did not make them like early rising. Both of them always hated to get up early and years did not cure them. Mr. Gladstone once owned that the struggle never grew less and that it was as hard to get out of bed for the morning service every day after he was seventy as when he was half that age.

Stumps the Sergeant.

Recently in one of Indianapolis' court rooms a "bootlegger" was dismissed by the judge on the grounds that the rural route box number on the search warrant, while correct, was not sufficient identification for the premises. The sergeant who had made the arrest after having found more than 200 quarts of the Volstead act violation in the residence, was heard to mumble as he left the court room: "The law's a curious thing."

Rosy Cheeks Without Paint.

Ruby lips that never grow lighter is the promise an English beauty expert is holding out to fair customers. The coloring is injected through a hypodermic, and does away with powder puff and lip stick. It can be used for coloring the cheeks as well.

HIS MISTAKE

But not a highway bore that name.

He thought to glory there must be
A level path that he should see;

But every road to which he came
Possessed a terrifying name.

He never thought that fame might lurk
Along the dreary path called Work.

He never thought to go and see
What marked the road called Industry.

Because it seemed so rough and high
He passed the road to Service by.

Yet had he taken either way
He might have come to fame some day.

PRIZED AS ENEMY OF SNAKE

Ichneumon Cherished in India Because of the Number of Deadly Reptiles It Makes Away With.

Some thousands of people are killed every year in India by snake bites. These venemous creatures are indeed one of the curses of that beautiful land, all the more so that from their stealthy, silent methods of progress it is impossible to say when an attack from one of them may be expected. An officer who incautiously allowed himself to fall asleep on the edge of the jungle, was horrified upon waking up to find that a large serpent had coiled itself about his knees. Afraid to move a finger for fear of irritating the creature, he silently prepared to meet his fate quietly and bravely as he could. Of a sudden the serpent raised its head as a rustle was heard among the herbage, and in an instant one of the troublesome little chicken-thieving species of animals known as the ichneu-mon jumped on its head and bit deeply into the back of its neck. The snake speedily released the officer, and a terrible fight went on between the two. At times the snake bit its assailant, who scurried off for a few seconds into the bush to eat certain leaves—an antidote to snake poison—and then dashed back to carry on the duel, which continued until the serpent was killed. The Indian plant is thought to be a sort of willow, probably like the guaco of South America—so called from the note of the bird known as the serpent-eating kite which is said to eat freely of its leaves. But no one is quite certain as to the name and appearance of the plant the clever ichneumon makes use of as an antidote to snake poison. Its discovery would speedily make a fortune for the lucky finder in India. The ichneumon is cherished for its hatred of all snakes and also because it destroys large numbers of crocodile eggs.

Planters Import Monkeys.

Thousands of monkeys recently picked the harvest of coconuts from the trees of the plantation of Fred Pape, "coconut king," at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. A gummy substance attacked the trees, and natives could not climb them to pick the nuts.

The monkeys were imported from the interior of South America. Workers shooed them up the trees and began throwing stones at the animals. The monkeys grabbed coconuts and returned the fire. Thus the trees were cleared in an unusually short time, and with little expense.

Built Nest on Tombstone.

A storm cock selected for its nest the lap of a tombstone statue in Oystermouth cemetery, in England, and there assembled the twigs and grass necessary to provide a home in which to rear her family. At the time a picture was taken the bird was standing guard over the nest, which contained five eggs which soon will be hatched. Ghosts evidently have no terrors for the storm king, or else this one was not superstitious.

Turtle Had Had Feast.

An Ontario farmer lost one of his little pigs in the river. The same day a little chick went into the river. A few days later he saw a snapping turtle and after killing it, brought it up to his house where he opened it and found inside a part of the chick, and the whole of the little pig, except one front leg.

Vegetable Leather.

The Japanese are producing from the inner bark of the mitsumata plant a good grade of vegetable leather, which is said to be almost as tough as the so-called French kid.

News of Constitutional Convention For Past Week

(Written by J. S. Hubbard, executive secretary Missouri Press Association.)

Jefferson City, Oct. 13.—Columbus day was fittingly observed by members of the constitutional convention on Thursday. After the opening prayer of the chaplain the high school chorus led the delegates in singing "America," and then sang for the convention "America the Beautiful." Col. M. E. Benton of Neosho, chairman of the Committee on Bill of Rights, gave a short address in which he eulogized the discoverer, whose achievement was described as the greatest event in the history of the world since the dawn of the Christian era.

The report of the Committe on Executive and Ministerial Departments had to undergo its second attack from members of the convention opposed to its adoption, when it came up in the convention this week in the form of the report of the committee of the whole on the amendments there approved. After the committee amendments had been acted on the report was taken up section by section for futher amendment or substitution and some other changes were made from the original committee report.

The principal objection centered on the budget provision of the report. Opponents declared that it gave the govenor legislative power, in that he was given the sole authority to pass on appropriations for the various state departments and the state institutions. The committee pointed out that the govenor simply provided the general assembly with information showing the needs of the departments and state institutions, at the beginning of each session, so that the appropriation bills could be taken up and disposed of early instead of being left until the closing hours of the session as at present. They urged that the general assembly still had power to strike out or reduce any item it desired, but was limited in that it could not add to appropriations in the general budget bill. Provision was made, however, for other appropriations when the budget bills had been acted upon, but these were to be for specific purposes and must carry with them the provision for payment.

The report of the Committee on Corporations may be taken up next week, though the absence of one of the members who has a minority report to present may postpone its consideration. The Bill of Rights may also be considered or the report of the Committee on Education. Two other reports are only partially completed in the committee of the whole, those of the committees on Judiciary and on Referendum. Both are held up by the absence of members who have special interest in the propositions.

"The general assembly shall in its legislative discretion provide for the safeguarding of the public health." This substitute to Proposal 192 has been approved by the committee of the whole in the constitutional convention after exhausting discussion. The original report of the committee provided that "The general assembly shall provide means for the safeguarding and promotion of the public health and welfare." A minority report offered as a substitute for the committee report provided that:

"The general assembly shall provide means for the safeguarding and promotion of the public health and welfare by the authorization of such sanitary, hygienic, and quarantine measures that have in the past, and which may in the future, be found to be effective in the prevention, the cure, and the prevention of the spread of disease; but that no authority shall be conferred upon any board of health, or other conservators of the public health, to compel any person or persons to submit to any medical treatment for the prevention, the cure, or the spread of any disease, against his or her will. Nor, in the enforcement of any sanitary, hygienic or quarantine measures shall any family be forcibly separated."

No proposition before the convention has been the subject of so much outside attention and the Committee on Public Health and Welfare has been deluged with protests and petitions that have run into the thousands. The chairman of the committee stated that it had been the sole purpose of the committee to give recognition, in the simple proposal submitted, to the work that had been done in recent years along the line of public health and welfare, and it was greatly surprised to receive protests, principally from the Christian Scientists, who seemed to discover in the proposal a purpose to subject individuals to some special form of treatment. Then the friends of the public health and welfare work had taken a hand in the matter and the result was the reception of many petitions asking that the proposal be adopted. It was not the purpose of the committee, as stated on the floor of the convention, to favor any one sect or form of treatment, but to provide recognition of public health whereby all might be benefited.

The principal opposition to the committee proposal, except as stated in the minority report, was that the matter was wholly covered in the bill of rights, which states that "all constitutional government is intended to promote the general welfare of the people." It was urged that no other declaration was necessary and that all that had been accomplished along the line of public health and welfare had been done under the provisions of this section. Friends of the measure acknowledged that this might be true, but that the matter ought to be treated in a specific manner that would make it perfectly clear to the layman. To meet objections of some and to comply with suggestions of others the committee introduced the substitute which was adopted. The minority report had but few votes in its favor.

Any new matter going into the constitution has a hard road to travel, if there is any opposition to its passage, as there almost always is. After being fully discussed and agreed upon by the committee to which it was referred it goes to the convention and then to the committee of the whole for discussion, amendment and approval. The report of the committee of the whole has to be approved by the convention, whence it goes to the Committee on Phraseology and Arrangement. Coming back to the convention it is read a second time and voted upon. It is then re-referred to the Committee on Phraseology and Arrangement. This committee reports it to the convention again and this time it is referred to the committee of the whole for further consideration and possible amendment. The convention then acts on the report of the committee of the whole and the proposition goes to engrossment and is placed on the order of third reading. The matter acted upon is printed for the use of the members and comes up for third reading and final passage. All votes taken up to this time are tentative and only require a majority of the votes of the members present. For final passage, however, each section or whole article must secure the constitutional majority of 42 votes to be made a part of the new constitution. All of which may lead one to the conclusion that constitution building is not child's play.

The report of the Committee on Initiative and Referendum is before the convention and has been considered for a little time in the committee of the whole. The majority report proposes few changes from the old act, but they are important. The percentage of signers for initiative and referendum is reversed, the proposition being that 8 per cent will be required for the referendum and 5 per cent for the initiative. To avoid delays in the submission of questions the governor and the general assembly are both given power to call special elections if necessary, the vote otherwise being taken at the regular general elections. Signers of petitions who are not able to write may make their mark, which must be witnessed by two citizens and the names and addresses of the voters written for them opposite their marks. Signers must also be registered voters wherever the law requires registration.

In the minority report the percentage of signers is increased to 10 per cent in both kinds of petitions. The petitions are to be left in the office of the clerk of the county court in counties where there is no registration of voters, and elsewhere, in the office of the election commissioners or other officers charged with the registration of voters. The petitions shall be signed in the presence of the election officer, and in the case of a voter who cannot write, his name is to be written for him by the election officer or deputy and he is to affix his mark opposite.

One amendment offered provides for 8 per cent of the voters for both initiative and referendum and another raise the number to 15. It is expected that if the minority report is given serious consideration an amendment will be passed providing that the petitions can be left with the justices of the peace in the smaller places and election commissioners in the cities. It is held by the proponents that if the voters are really interested in the propositions which are being initiated or referred they will find no difficulty in going to a convenient place to register their names. The circulation of petitions, it is agreed, has not been a success, and there is a well defined effort to make a change that will better conditions and yet not deprive people of their rights of initiating or referring laws.

JOHN D. MUSTAIN, 80 YEARS OLD, OF PICKERING IN TOWN

John D. Mustain, who lives south of Pickering was in Maryville today to have some dental work done. Mr. Mustain will be 80 years old January 21, but says that he is still able to get about and that he walks most every place he goes. The trip to Maryville was most too far to walk, however, so his grandson, Johnnie Fink of Wilcox, brought him down. "Uncle John" as he is called by some of his close friends, is a Democrat. When asked if he would vote for Jim Reed he said that he had voted for so many men whom he thought to be all right and whom had afterwards turned out to be crooked that he had about quit voting for the whole bunch. Mrs. Mustain will be 79 years old March 23. Mr. Mustain came to Nodaway County in 1868.

DODGE BROTHERS
BUSINESS COUPE

With this coupe Dodge Brothers have proved once for all that a closed car can be as sturdy and practically as inexpensive as an open roadster.

This is largely due to the all-steel body—the first ever marketed—which admits of lower cost of manufacture through standardized machine production. Unlike wood, the steel surface will take a finish of enamel, baked on at high temperature. This process results in a permanent lustre, and eliminates the trouble and expense of repainting.

HOW OUR REPRESENTATIVES MAKE THE NATION'S LAWS

What happens to the thousands of bills introduced in Congress, and how do those that are finally passed succeed in seeing the light of day?

In our latest booklet of the series on Our Government we tell the story of just how Congress goes about its work, together with some interesting sidelights on the customs which have an important bearing on our legislation.

This booklet is the last of the stories of Our Government. We are contemplating a new series of articles that will be equally interesting and instructive. We shall be glad to put on our list the names of all those in this community who wish to receive them.

COMEDIANS HAVE CHARMS AND SUPERSTITIONS TOO

Walter Vernon In "Bringing Up Father On His Vacation" Has As Charm

Much has been said and heard of the superstition of the people of the stage, running from the leading woman to the stage hand, but who would ever imagine that the apparently happy-go-lucky comedians of the merry, musical comedy field have their own little superstitions. Who ever heard tell of them? And what could they be? A least Walter Vernon, who has been playing "Jiggs" in the George MacManus musical comedy "Bringing up Father", for the past eight years, admits that the little goodluck charms he carries have been in his possession for the past twenty years, and he avers that his little charmers were passed down to him by an old minstrel, no other than Tom Bryant, who inherited them from another old timer. It seems that the greatest deed which a comedian who feels that the end is near, can do to exemplify undying friendship for one of his fellow comedians, is to deed or give the treasure token which have been the symbol of his success.

The prima donna may have her luck diamond pendant, and the dancer her be-jeweled garter, but it remains for the comedian to have his lucky big shoes. Every one remembers the big shoe that have been the part of every successful comedian's make-up. Well, they are the comedian's little good luck tokens. Bert Williams had his, and probably disposed of them in his will. Jack Hazard has his, as well as McIntyre & Heath, Al Jolson, and others of the fun-making game. They are always found wearing their big shoes some time during the performance. Walter Vernon wears his during the last act of "Bringing Up Father on his Vacation". And swears they have never been worn in any production except a hit. As an example of how these good luck charmers are passed down to generations Water Vernon cites the case of Harry Bulger, whose flat beauties were willed to him by "Old Hoss" Hoey of the team of Hoey & Evans in whose company "A Parlor Match" Anna Held first came to fame in America.

WILL PUT PARADE STORY IN SCHOOLS

TEACHERS TO FRAME ST. LOUIS STAR STORY

BIG PAPER COMPLIMENTS

Says Floats Represent "World of Work and Lot of Intellectual Planning"

Almost a full page of the St. Louis Star of yesterday was devoted to pictures of floats in the School Day parade, held here Wednesday, and to a story regarding the School Day. Five hundred copies of this issue were sent to the Chamber of Commerce and can be had by calling at that office.

A number of the teachers of the county have signified their intention of having the page framed and hung in the school room in memory of what they term the biggest affair Nodaway County ever had.

Following are extracts from the story in the Star, which was written by Roy Godsey, a former Nodaway County boy:

The spotlight was thrown on Nodaway County rural School activities here Wednesday, when a crowd of 18,000 persons celebrated at the county seat. More than 4,000 school children from the county's rural school districts took part in a parade and entered seventy-eight floats from as many districts in a pageant which reflected originality and the development of a community spirit. It was concrete evidence that community spirit properly developed, can accomplish something worth while.

Maryville, like thousands of other towns, in the past has spent thousands of dollars for street fairs and street carnivals, many of which have been made up in a large measure of fakers and a program of amusements that was questionable and not approved by hundreds of citizens. It has in this followed the idea of having the town furnish entertainment for the country people, but on Wednesday it was the country folk coming with entertainment for the town people.

The school pageant was sponsored by the Maryville Chamber of Commerce and brought the country business man and his family and the town business man and his family together in a real Nodaway County affair.

The Chamber of Commerce realized that too little attention has been given to the country in the last quarter of a century. America has been building with tremendous activity her big industrial centers, and while she was doing this to meet the demands of the manufacturing age, other phases of life have suffered.

There are five institutions which have the responsibility of community making—business, government, school, church, home. The Maryville Chamber of Commerce realized that where these institutions are progressing normally and in right relationship with each other, there is certain to exist the very best sort of life and living, and it is to Maryville's credit that it is far outreaching the city industrial leaders and city communities in the organization of rural communities on a par with industrial and city life.

Wednesday saw the beginning of the making of a school film to take its place with the Nodaway County agricultural film. The influence of the school film will grow. Its first chapter shows the work done in the schools, such as the teaching of vitalized agriculture, facts learned from history and crops harvested from the fields of Nodaway County—the parade floats that reflected the school life of Nodaway County. Each float represented a "world of work and a wonderful lot of intelligent planning."

STOP THE LEAKS—SAVE COAL—BE WARM AND COZY

To Save Money and Coal, Inspect Your House, Says Commerce Department.

To save money and coal, inspect your house, says the Commerce Department's housing division, and do these things:

Stop all unregulated drafts through the house.

Use storm doors and storm or double windows in cold climate, if practicable at least on the side of the house facing the prevailing cold wind.

Plug cracks around in all windows and doors. Use felt, if necessary, under outside doors. Reset door hinges if necessary.

See that there are no cracks in window casings or between walls and casings, or between the sash. Tighten sash locks. Use putty and weather stripping where necessary.

Inspect windows and walls of attic. Dead air in an attic keeps the lower stories warmer. Plug up any openings from attic between walls.

In basement plug any openings from outside or between walls. Cover furnace and steam and hot water heating pipes, if practicable.

Close openings between walls and use newspapers under the carpets if there are drafts through the floor.

Study manufacturers' directions as to care of furnace. Replace cracked or broken grates. Examine dampers of fireplaces. When fireplaces and stoves are not in use dampers should be closed. Clean chimney and stove pipes periodically or whenever necessary.

Lock windows when closed. Draw shades, if practicable. Turn off heat in rooms with windows left open and in unused rooms. Remember that good ventilation is possible without large openings.

Remember that thermometers are better gages of heat than are the various members of a family, each with his own idea of want. Sixty-eight to seventy degrees is a normal, healthful temperature for a room in which people live.

MARYVILLE BEATS CHILLICOTHE 25 TO 0 IN SATURDAY'S GAME

Local Boys Had Advantage Throughout Game—Next One to be at King City Friday

The Maryville High School football team cross another hurdle in the race for district honors by defeating the Chillicothe eleven Saturday by a score of 25 to 0. Only at the first of the game was Maryville's goal in danger when by a series of forward passes and end runs the Chillicothe squad brought the ball within ten yards of the goal. The Maryville touchdowns were made by O'Banion and Masters, O'Banion making three of the four.

On a kick off in the second half a Chillicothe boy received the ball and carried it thirty-five yards before downed. The ball was well within the Maryville territory and a punt was expected from the Maryville boys. Instead of punting O'Banion carried the ball for a 25-yard gain and in neutral territory.

Willoughby of Maryville played during the greater part of the game with a cast on his ankle at quarterback.

Coach H. Frank Lawrence in commenting on the game said that every Maryville player starred and that the boys put up a fine fight.

Mountjoy, Willoughby, Roelofson and Phipps were used as substitutes on the Maryville squad.

What Makes The Clock At Real Estate Bank Run?

If its not perpetual motion, what is it? In the window of the Real Estate Bank there hangs a clock. This clock has no works and is not wound yet it keeps accurate time.

Under the clock hangs a sign that reads, "What makes it go? Ask the man inside." The man inside was asked, and he submitted the following in answer to the query.

The revolution of the earth on its axis every twenty-four hours possesses both a rotary and centrifugal force. The rotary force is neutralized so we do not notice it, by the tremendous size of the earth's sphere, and the centrifugal force is neutralized by the magnetic attraction which causes articles to fall instead of fly out into space when dropped, nomically calculating the proper reduction in size so that the circumference of the clock's dial bears the same relationship to its axis as the circumference of the earth bears to the axis of the earth and also utilizing the attraction of the moon to the earth, which is found to be felt upon the hour hand of the clock when this neutralization is removed by the above mentioned scientific discovery, then the hands are allowed to rotate in accord with the revolution of the earth, the same as the earth rotates on its axis, except that the calculation is such that the hands of the clock make two revolutions to the earth's one.

Petroleum and Independence

SAYS the Chicago Tribune, "The automobile has increased the ability of people to take care of themselves—America's streets and roads are filled with motor cars because—the American in his own car feels the independence of going where he pleases and when he pleases."

The effective use of automotive power depends upon an adequate supply and efficient distribution of gasoline and other petroleum products. The users of automobiles and motor trucks of the Middle West would find themselves seriously handicapped were it not for the practically universal distribution of gasoline and oils, maintained by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana). This distribution system is continually growing, expanding, and penetrating new corners of the 10 states served by the Company.

The number of automobiles in the United States increased 13% during the first six months of 1922 over 1921. The increase in the states served by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) during the past two years was over 36%. These figures give a fair idea of the rate of increase of distribution facilities required of this Company.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) expands in proportion to the increasing needs of the people it serves. It maintains 3973 bulk stations, so located as to assure rapid distribution of gasoline and oils. The number of these stations is promptly increased as the need for them arises. It maintains 1605 service stations, situated with a view to the convenience of the motoring public. It maintains throughout the rural districts 7167 tank wagons, which serve the farmer at regular intervals, enabling him to keep his truck, tractor, or motor car ready for instant use.

This efficient service of petroleum products is maintained at a high degree of effectiveness under all conditions and is the dominant factor in assuring the independence of the motorist of the Middle West.

"Meet Me at Montgomery-Cummins."

The Prize Winning Essay

Written by Wilson Dowden of Myrtle Tree School, grade eight, age 13 years.

LETTER

"Why One Should Trade at Montgomery-Cummings Clothing Company."

Last Saturday, as I rested the horses from discing the wheat ground on the "west forty," I overheard the following conversation between Bill Smith of ——— school and Tom Simpkins of our home school, who chanced to meet at the cross roads just in front of my team.

"Hey, Bill, is your school goin' to enter the big parade o' floats and you kids march before the movie camera?" asked Tom as he pulled back on the lines.

"Aw, I don' know whether I'll go or not, I ain't got nothin' to wear. You know that suit dad got me last spring from that mail order house?"

Tom nodded that he remembered and Bill continued, "Well, the pants have lost their shape and its just about ready to tear in three or four places. Dad said they cost too much to get 'nother'n this winter, if they was all like that'n."

This was enough. Tying my horses, I stepped over and joined the conversation.

"Boys," said I, "I overheard your conversation and wondered why you didn't patronize your home merchants. Why didn't you get a Hart Schaffner & Marx suit and it would have been like new yet."

"What's the 'diff' in them suits and any other?" eagerly asked Bill.

"Why, for style and quality, they can't be beat," I replied. "They hold their shape longer because of the quality of the material in them. They have enough style about them to suit the most particular person."

Bill straightened up and began to be very much interested.

"I allus wondered why your clothes looked so much better'n mine, but Dad said it was 'cause you paid more, and took better care of them than I did."

"Bill," I assured him, "I don't pay any more, perhaps not as much, because I don't have to buy as often. Neither do I take any extraordinary care of my clothes, but suits are like calves in a way. You might have a scrub calf and I own a registered one. They would both be calves, but when sold mine would bring the most money."

Here To interrupted and said, "Why I know. It's Montgomery-Cummings Clothing Co."

"That's the place," I added. "They also sell the Stetson hats, the best hat that's made; the Manhattan and Ideal shirts, that kind that fits and wears; the Phoenix hosiery, the hose that wears like buckskin, and that famous brand of underwear—Munsing—you know about it. And overalls, why they have overalls and work shirts down there to fit Mutt and Jeff, even to Fatty Arbuckle or Babe Ruth. In fact, everything in the clothing line for men and boys, and their prices are always in accordance with the quality you buy.

"Yes," but Tom interrupted, "it's harder to trade in a store where you do not know the clerks. You are not sure of a guarantee."

"Now look here, boys," I said, "you won't be there very long until you're acquainted. My grandfather, J. F. Dowden, my four uncles, my father, A. B. Dowden, my four brothers ,and I do our trading there and KNOW their guarantee is sound. Now, will you take our word for it? If you don't go see for yourself."

Bill nodded, and as he drove on, said, "Well, you've convinced me. I'm goin' to get Dad to go this afternoon, if I can."

Before he drove out of hearing distance, another thought came to me. "Say, Bill," I shouted, "tell your Dad that they's all Republicans in that store and he'll go, sure."

(Beg pardon Wilson, you were misinformed.)
